

A Suit for Indianapolis pages 384-392

Emily Sue's mother and Emily convinced Homer's mom that he needed a suit to wear to Indianapolis. Homer had to disagree though. He didn't see what the problem was with wearing his own clothes he had chosen. In the end though he ended up going to get a suit, because his mom said so. And that was the end of that.

On the way up to Welch they didn't talk much, except when Homer asked how Dorothy Plunk was doing. When they got to Welch Homer didn't want Emily to come with him to go pick out a suit. He said he was old enough to pick out a suit by himself. On his way to the store O'Dell met up with him, and they picked out an orange suit.

Homer saw a sign saying Jack Kennedy for president. Mr.Kennedy was going to come and speak in a couple minutes in Welch. While Mr.Kennedy was speaking Homer asked what he was going to do in space. He didn't know what but asked Homer what he should do. He told him that they should go to the moon.

When Emily saw the suit, she made Homer get a blue suit instead of the orange suit.
