

Cape Coalwood pages 112-128

After this rocket mishap Homer felt really guilty. All the boys were dealt with differently depending on their parents, while Quentin was let off the leash. When Homer got home his dad took all of his supplies and chemicals and dumped them all in the trash. Homer felt guilty for putting Byovski in danger of losing his job, so he went to check on him. When he went and saw Byovski, Byovski wasn't fired but he was moved to a coal loader shift. Byovski was happy because he would make more money. Also he had another four Auks that he made for BCMA (Big Creek Missile Agency).

BCMA decided they would keep going besides the adversity. So they tested more powder inside soda bottles. They found the finer the ground powder the bigger the explosion. During their testing though, they made too much noise in the town so they had to find another spot.

That Sunday they all went to church. The preacher talked about fathers and sons, and how the fathers should help their sons achieve their goals not hinder them. The people behind this were the Great Six, the grade school teachers. After that Homer's dad found them a new location.